Arthur Keleti

Arthur Keleti is an expert on cyber security, and a visionary in his field. More than twenty years of working for leading financial and telecommunication companies in the role of business development, communication and cyber security manager, has molded him into a forward-thinking specialist in his profession.

Arthur Keleti is the president and founder of the Voluntary Cyber Defence Collaboration, a civil organization of cyber security professionals supporting critical infrastructures.

Today he works for T-Systems Hungary, where he has served as IT Security Strategist since 1999. He is the founder of the long running East-European cyber security grand conf-expo: Day of IT Security (ITBN).

He has a broad view and understanding of the global IT Security market, which he actively helps to grow and develop. He is particularly interested in the ever changing world of corporate and private security issues, keeping a watchful eye on the upcoming events of our near future, and its sometimes frightening and alienating tendencies.
